See How We've Helped Others

We deliver valuable studies to our clients. Examples of our work include:

1. Local and national AIDS Drug Assistance Programs (ADAPs) used our budget impact model to justify increases in budget allocation as new drugs became available. Our study was published in the Journal of AIDS.
2. Our literature synthesis and health economic strategy document for a neurological disease provided comprehensive disease and competitor information that the client needed. The client used the information to prepare health economics case report forms for the clinical development program and design supplemental studies to generate a value package for a new product.

3. We provided a customized economic model for a client to estimate the costs and benefits associated with various treatments for chronic pain in multiple countries. The client used the results to confidently launch a new chronic pain treatment in competitive markets.
